The Art of Computing Series - Disk Performance

Well, here is a little secret most computer user and even some Information Technology (IT) professional don't know. Ninety percent or more of computer performance issues encountered daily are caused by disk storage. Ninety percent is my educated guess since no one I know has conducted any scientific study on the subject. And at least one of the reasons that we still do not have an industry-wide study is because there is not an agreed upon disk performance standard among disk storage manufacturers!
